BANDMANN OPERA CO.
"The Dollar Princess."

There was a regular Astor Monday crowd at the Theatre Royal last night when "The Dollar Princess," a play which has been all the rage in the European capitals and which has run for 350 nights at Berlin was splendidly staged by the Bandmann Opera Company. The piece has an intelligent story, smart dialogue, and is set to operatic music. By many, it is regarded as the best thing that has been produced by the Bandmann Company during their present season. It is certainly one of the most popular. In three acts, it is by A. M. Wilner and F. Grunbaum, and was adapted for the English stage by Basil Hood. The lyrics are by Adrian Ross, and the music by Leo Fall. It was produced at Daly's Theatre, London, by Mr. George Edwards, and the Bandmann Company have the exclusive rights for the East by special arrangement with Mr. George Edwards.

The plot is laid in America, and centers round Harry O. Conder, and his sister, who are multi-millionaires. The former indulges in a fancy to engage as servant titled members of the British aristocracy. It is a source of infinite delight to Conder to have his cocktail served by a young James McGregor, whose successful line dates back to the verge of the prehistoric, to have his stirrup held by John, Earl of Quorn, and to see a duke acting as a footman. The life of the tale, however, is Alice, who is of the "money talks" order, and quite a little more attaches to this young lady. She is arrogant and contemptuous, the collection of dukes no doubt assisting her to this stand. Consequently, when she meets Fairfax, she is annoyed that he will not be over-awed. She engages him as her secretary and underdog to humiliate him; but she falls in love with him. So does he with her, and he sets about to conquer the scornful beauty by other means. He scores in a signal and rather brutal manner. "She says she will love him," he says to himself, "but he will not be bought and refused her, and we have the moral in the main musical number of the play, 'The Dollar Princesses,' who with all their money cannot buy love. Fairfax throws up his situation and goes to California, where in the third act, having made his fortune, he is seen as the proprietor of a palatial bungalow. To him now comes Alice, with pride humbled and the tale that she has lost all her money. Fairfax plays on her jealousy until she discloses her true feelings and love is triumphant at last.

There was lately standing room in the Theatre last night, and the piece went with a delightful buoyancy, its pretty music greatly appealing to the prompt. Encores were again and again demanded. It would fill more space than we can afford to refer at length to the individual successes achieved, but the names of Miss Florence Benson, who is charming, "Princess Alice," Miss Wilton, "Harriet," Miss Conder, "Leon," Miss James McGregor, and Mr. Harry Cole deserve to be given special prominence. The last-named in the part of Mr. Bulger, a confidential clerk, was the funniest member of the party. He was his old self and sent the house into a fit of laughter. "Tonight, 'The Dollar Princess' is to be reproduced again, and a bumper house is sure to witness the play."

NEIGHBOURS OF KING
EDWARD.

England has forty counties, and in only one has the King a country house at which he resides; for, except on State occasions, Windsor Castle is out of the reckoning. It is small wonder therefore that Norfolk people pride themselves on their importance.

But where big estates are the rule the number of great houses is apt to be limited, says the Geographical Magazine; so no one can pretend that there is a good neighbourhood round Sandringham.

Nearest at hand, in fact, in the garden-stands York cottage, the abode of the Prince and the Princess of Wales. This is a small plain looking house, which has had many additions. "New baby, new room," was the remark of a local octogenarian.

Appleton, which still belongs to the King and Queen of Norway, lies about a mile off, and is really a glorified farmhouse, with a charming garden designed on the lines of that of Mr. Austin, the poet laureate, at Swinford Old Manor in Kent.

One of the King's nearest neighbours is Lord Farquhar, at Castle Rising, which he and Lady Farquhar rent. Lord Farquhar is a man whom fortune seems to have taken under his special protection. He began life as a rich banker, and when "plain Sir Horace Farquhar" had the unprecedented honour for a commoner of being best man at a Royal wedding, that of the then Duke and Duchess of Fife.

He is a man of parts, witty, a clever talker and a good musician; he is fond of early rising and of exercise, and keeps a small organ in the library of his house in Grosvenor Square, playing on it for an hour or so after dinner. The hall, Castle Rising, is a charming old house, and the village has a Norman church and the ruins of a Norman castle, also some quaint almshouses, where the inmates wear the cloaks and high-peaked hats of former years.

Not far from Castle Rising is Hillington, the grand Gothic house that belongs to Sir William and Lady Folke. This place his late shooting, and Sir William's preserves have often been shot over by the King, the Prince of Wales and the German Emperor.
Naturally the owners are and have been on terms of friendship with Royal personages. "Conham Lodge, which is about a mile away, also belongs to the Folkes family, and the late Dowager Lady Folke used to make it her residence.

Queen Alexandra once called on her, and one day on arriving in a ponycart she was asked by the butler—a new servant—"What name, please?" The Queen was, of course, immensely amused at this naive question. Then the story goes that some years ago a party of young people from the Hall, Castle Rising, were walking along the drive toward Hillington. They saw a carriage approach and conceived the idea of standing in a row to stop it on its way.

They accordingly did so, and when it got near they saw to their horror that they had barred the passage of no less august a personage than the late Queen Victoria.

Houghton Hall, which belongs to Lord Cholmondeley, the Lord Great Chamberlain, is a splendid place, at present rented by Lord Lady Stafford and her husband, Mr. Kennard. She is a thrice married person. In the '90s she came over to London as Mrs. Colgate, a rich American widow, and was distinguished by always wearing a tall white egrette in her hair in the evening, and most magnificent diamonds. In 1898 she married Lord Stratford, who a year later met with a tragic death, so Mr. Martyn Kennard is her third husband.

Houghton bears silent witness to our old time gambling propensities. There is a blank space where the central flight of hall door steps should be found. The place was once owned by a Lord Orford, and one of his feats was to gamble away that special flight of steps. The winner carried them off and they have never since been replaced.

Another fine place is Holkham, where Lord and Lady Leicester—often receive royal guests during the shooting season.
This is a vast Palladian edifice, which stands in a park as flat as a pancake. It has a white marble hall and staircase of much magnificence, some fine statuary and a vast library, which contains the most valuable private collection of manuscripts in the kingdom. Holkham is said to be the nearest point of land in England to the shores of Denmark.

Raynham, the old home of Lord Townshend, is now leased by Mr. and Mrs. Neumann, prior to which it was tenanted for several years by Mrs. Lawson Johnston.
It has a well authenticated ghost story.
Ken Hill, near King's Lynn, belongs to Sir Edward Green, who also has a place in Yorkshire: Hunstanton Hall, on the east coast, has been owned by the Le Strange family for countless centuries.
It has a glorious old garden, with grass walks, clipped edges and herbaceous borders. Its owners have always held a place in courtly circles, and Mrs. Roland Le Strange is an aunt of the present Lord Hastings. Con-ham House belongs to the Elwes family, who may also be reckoned among our untitled nobility.

Many stories go the rounds which show the kindly consideration of the King and Queen for their neighbours near Sandringham. On one occasion when Queen Alexandra was driving past the house of a family with whom she had always been on cordial terms she noticed that the flag which usually flew from the tower was now at half-mast.

The Queen, fearing that this might betoken trouble, turned aside to make enquiries. On the way to the front door it struck her that if the family had had really had news it would be better that she should not intrude upon their grief.
Later on the mistress of the house was much astonished to hear that the Queen had called at a side entrance to enquire if all was well, and on being reassured had gone quietly away with neither word nor message.

Football Notes.

By winning the Hongkong Challenge Shield and the Suddlers and Sailors' Club trophy in the same season the Buffs have established a record in Hongkong football.

This will constitute the length of the achievements in the Colony for before the last season is finished they will have left 38 of the years. They never seemed over-enthusiastic about their play in Hongkong, but in the winter season they will go on to Singapore with the good wishes of all true sportsmen for future triumphs.

There need be little written about the Buffs' play on Saturday, for the soldiers shaped like winners throughout the whole of the game. These who were the first match between the teams could not be that the Buffs were the better all-round team.

They deserved victory then as far as the Buffs' play was concerned, but few will grumble at the circumstances which made a replay necessary. Certainly, the made-up committee have no complaint to make on this score, for their finances should be materially advantaged as the result of a second encounter.

The Buffs played a beautiful game of football, the perfect understanding between the various departments of the team was marvellous. Certainly, the made-up committee have no complaint to make on this score, for their finances should be materially advantaged as the result of a second encounter.

The Buffs played a beautiful game of football, the perfect understanding between the various departments of the team was marvellous. They never seemed over-enthusiastic about their play in Hongkong, but in the winter season they will go on to Singapore with the good wishes of all true sportsmen for future triumphs.

There need be little written about the Buffs' play on Saturday, for the soldiers shaped like winners throughout the whole of the game. These who were the first match between the teams could not be that the Buffs were the better all-round team.

They deserved victory then as far as the Buffs' play was concerned, but few will grumble at the circumstances which made a replay necessary. Certainly, the made-up committee have no complaint to make on this score, for their finances should be materially advantaged as the result of a second encounter.

TRIP TO SEATON.

In connection with the Wesleyan Church a launch picnic to Seaton was run yesterday. It was an ideal day for a picnic, and Seaton is an ideal spot. Over 250 people came and they had a royal time. Having arrived at the destination there was no difficulty in amusing the folk. It did not seem too hot for sailors and soldiers to enjoy a good game of football, or for branches of the Army and Navy to enjoy a friendly tug of war; for the most part the civilians present looked on at these things from a distance only. Some preferred a quiet walk along the beach and over the rocks, while a few ventured to climb the hills near by. It was no easy matter to cater for so large a number; but everybody had a good time. After tea photographs were taken of a group as far as they could, five or six cameras did the necessary. After plenty more games, including sports for the children, the party began to fill up the launch again for the return journey. With a harmonium on board there was no fear of dullness, and the launches, side by side, steamed homeward with a tired but happy party.
